

The 2026 Printing Report

16,000 survey responses.

4,000,000 users.

1 clear takeaway.

Printing still matters.

Most people don't think about printing until they suddenly need it. It's the shipping label that stands between you and a package drop-off. It's the notes that have to be in hand before a big meeting starts. It's the contract waiting on a signature to move business forward. It's the school assignment that can't be turned in without a hard copy. In those moments, printing transforms from an afterthought into a necessity.

For millions, whether living in multifamily communities, working in coworking spaces, running a business, or simply exhausted by the cost, hassle, and privacy concerns posed by home and office printers, printing is a small service with surprising weight. We all rely on printing more than we realize, and when access is limited, the disruption is immediate.

WithMe, Inc. powers printing for nearly 4 million Americans nationwide through its self-serve amenities and workplace solutions. This report, built on 16,000 survey responses from PrintWithMe users, clearly shows that printing isn't obsolete. It's thriving.

Shared printing delivers measurable value by eliminating the cost and burden of clunky, outdated equipment, lightening staff workloads, and supporting remote professionals with secure, convenient printing beyond the home office.

1.1M+ unique users printed with PrintWithMe from Jan. 1 – Dec. 31, 2025

33M+ pages were printed with PrintWithMe from Jan. 1 – Dec. 31, 2025

82% of survey respondents label PrintWithMe “essential”

50% of respondents use self-serve printers, like PrintWithMe, at least a few times a month

40% of residents use shared printers, like PrintWithMe, as often, or more often, than other amenities

Where Shared Printing Is Thriving

PrintWithMe is actively used across all 50 states, but these cities boast the highest printing usage in the WithMe network. Whether it's the result of population density, hybrid work trends, or strong demand from residents and leasing offices, these metros mark where self-serve printing is most in demand and most valued.

What and Why People Print

Survey results reveal that shared printers support a broad mix of personal, professional and academic needs.

The real value of a shared printer isn't in its location. It's in trust. Printing often involves sensitive information. Users want confidence that their documents will remain private until pickup. Across survey data, security and privacy consistently rank as the top priorities for those using a community printer.

50%

of surveyed respondents use a shared printer at least a few times a month

4 in 5

residents at properties with a shared printer don't own a personal printer of those, 43% say limited space is the top reason of respondents say a secure release privacy feature is "important" or "critical"

88%

The Future of Shared Printing in Apartment Communities

As remote and hybrid work continue to define modern living, residents increasingly expect convenient access to the same professional tools they rely on at work without the responsibility of maintaining them. This evolution toward managed, on-demand amenities is reshaping how properties deliver value.

Printing, once an overlooked necessity, is transitioning into a shared service that supports flexible lifestyles, reduces operational strain, and elevates the resident experience through thoughtful design and technology integration.

The future of shared printing in apartment communities lies in smart, secure and seamlessly managed solutions that adapt to how people live and work.

70%

of residents work from home at least one day per week

30%

of residents use their building's community space, either exclusively or in combination with their apartment, when working from home

30%

of residents are printing business documents when using a shared printer

From restocking supplies to troubleshooting issues, the on-site team at BH Management's Iconic on Alvarado found themselves having to dedicate countless hours to maintaining their outdated DIY resident printer. And despite all their efforts, they still couldn't keep up with resident demand.

Assistant General Manager Mignon Watkins was introduced to PrintWithMe through her peers at BH Management. Watkins quickly saw how PrintWithMe could not only meet their printing needs but also simplify operations.

"The transition to PrintWithMe was straightforward, smooth and efficient," Watkins recalls. "Customer service helped us with the setup and made it easy for us to roll it out to our residents using the pamphlets we received. It was a very easy process."

Since switching to PrintWithMe in 2020, the property has saved significant time while also elevating their resident experience. The self-serve model allows residents to print 24/7 without involving the leasing office. With over 64,000 pages printed by nearly 2,600 users to date, PrintWithMe has quickly become one of the building's most-used amenities.

"It's hands-on for residents and hands-off for us," said Watkins. The team now highlights the printer during tours and saves hours of time every week with the burden of inventory management and troubleshooting removed. For both staff and residents, it's a simple switch that made a big difference.

"I recommend PrintWithMe because it's easy and convenient for residents and takes the load off our staff. Residents can use it whenever they need, and we don't have to worry about maintenance."

Looking Ahead

Across apartment communities, coworking spaces, cafes, coffee shops, and businesses, printing remains a relied-upon service for everyday moments that matter: prepping for meetings, shipping returns, finalizing important paperwork, completing academic assignments. The data featured in this report makes one thing clear: printing isn't a relic; it still plays an essential role in how people live and work.

As more Americans blur the lines between home, work, and community space, access to simple, reliable tools, like printing, helps keep daily life running smoothly. Whether it's residents or remote professionals, people continue to rely on printing that works when and where they need it.

Looking ahead, the focus shifts toward smarter, more sustainable models of shared access. Managed print solutions are replacing fragmented setups, offering reliability, security, and support that match how people actually work today: flexibly, collaboratively, and across multiple spaces. For operators and workplace leaders, the opportunity lies in creating connected environments where printing functions as seamlessly as the Wi-Fi: always on, always ready and never an afterthought.
